

Greenlandic handicraft – more than mere souvenirs

CITES (Washington Convention)

CITES is the acronym for “Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Flora and Fauna”.

The Washington Convention makes it possible to track the degree of trade in certain endangered or threatened animal species. With your CITES permit you are therefore contributing to securing a sustainable future for the respective animal populations.

The Washington Convention is, among other things, known from campaigns against trade in tigers, turtles, other exotic animal species and ivory.

The Convention has been signed by more than 170 countries and protects the world’s many threatened and endangered plant and animal species by regulating the international trade in wildlife species. There are more than 4,800 animal species and 25,000 plant species listed in CITES. About 30 of these animal species and a few of the plant species occur in Greenland.

The CITES certificate is more than simply a customs document. It is also a guarantee that the goods originate from species that can legally be hunted in Greenland.

Notice that the CITES rules differ for tourists and for citizens of Greenland. Find more information on www.naalakkersuisut.gl

IF you have a CITES permit for your purchase.

(This does not apply to species that are not threatened and therefore not covered by CITES).

WALRUS

An export ban of walrus is in effect by August 1, 2016. This means that tourists (non-Greenland residents) are no longer allowed to export items of walrus from Greenland.

About the CITES permit

The CITES permit looks like this:

It is important that you receive the front page, the red copy and the blue copy.

The CITES permit is only valid for exporting items for personal use. The items must be transported in your personal luggage.

If the shop itself does not complete and issue you with the CITES permit, request one in the shop.

The front page	Show the front page to the customs of your home country
The red copy	Keep the red copy
The blue copy	Show the blue copy to the Greenland Customs
The yellow copy	The shop will send the yellow copy to the CITES M.A.

No permit

If you haven't received a CITES permit for the handicraft items you have bought on the street or in a shop, you can contact the Greenland CITES Management Authority and ask for a permit.

REMEMBER that illegal export or failure to obtain a permit can result in confiscation of goods and a fine.
